A community safety open day at Stoke Newington Town Hall proved to be fun for all the family

HUNDREDS of residents turned out for a community safety open day. Police officers, firefighters and staff from the Council's community safety and domestic violence teams were all on hand to answer questions at Stoke Newington Town Hall on 13 March. DALSTON'S £2.3M

By Emma Britton

PLANS to transform Dalston town centre with improved cycle routes, lighting, more trees, and a 20mph speed limit can now go ahead after the Council secured £2.3million in funding.

There will also be new crossing points between Ridley Road and Dalston Kingsland station, while the relocation of bus stops and cycle stands will make it easier to get around.

Further improvements include dropped kerbs for wheelchair users and those with pushchairs, safer crossings for blind and visually impaired pedestrians, and the introduction of CCTV.

It is hoped the improvements will make what is already a popular town centre for local shoppers and tourists even more attractive, while retaining its unique character. The plans are part of wider improvements to the area, which include building more than 500 new homes, a library and public archive, shops, restaurants and modern public square, with a new London Overground station at the heart of the development.

Dalston residents welcomed the plans. Divya Guha said: "It may be difficult to travel when road works start, but it's a small price to pay for a nicer area."

Ruth Ganthony added: "The cash injection will improve Dalston and Kingsland Road no end. It's an ever popular place to live, but needs amenities to match. The new station will be fantastic, and cycle routes are a must on such a busy bus route. Plus, with the prestigious task of hosting the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, the area deserves some TLC."

Proposals to upgrade Kingsland High Street were submitted to the Greater London Authority (GLA) who awarded the Council £1.3million. An additional £1million was granted by the London Development Agency for wider town centre improvements.

Steve Douglas, the Council's Corporate Director for Neighbourhoods and Regeneration, added: "We're delighted that Transport for London supported our proposals and we look forward to this transformation of a key town centre and gateway into the borough."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Election build-up

THE regular column from the Mayor of Hackney won't be appearing in Hackney Today until after the Council and Mayoral elections, which take place on 6 May.
This is because of regulations governing local government publicity in the run-up to elections. The rules mean that Hackney Today will not feature or mention any elected politician or candidate during this period, unless there is a need to respond to an issue of public importance.
The rules also apply to the General Election, which had not yet been called as Hackney Today went to press.

100-plus new homes

CONSTRUCTION work on over 100 new homes for social renting will begin soon at three housing estates in Hackney.
The Council's planning committee agreed proposals on 10 March to build 114 new homes for Ottaway Court and Rendlesham House, in E5, and Bridport House in Colville Estate, N1. It is all part of a wider programme to build new social rented homes on Hackney estates, which has received £16million in Government funding through the Homes and Communities Agency (HCA) since last year.
The HCA funding is part of a new Government initiative allowing local authorities to build new homes for social rent for the first time in several decades.
George McGee, Chair of the Six Estates Steering Group, said: "This is absolutely marvellous news – there is a real need for new social rented homes in Hackney, and the Council has been very successful in securing grant funding for this from the HCA."
Construction is set to begin soon, with Bridport House tenants being re-housed, while sites at Ottaway Court and Rendlesham House are already cleared.
The Council has been working with residents to draw up plans for the regeneration work, including family homes with gardens and balconies, and open spaces.

Sisters doing it for themselves

MORE than 130 young women from across Hackney celebrated International Women's Day at a free event at the Ocean in Mare Street.
The day offered activities for 13 to 19-year-old women in the borough. Hackney's first annual Public Speaking Championship for young women launched the 11 March event and was won by Bridge Academy (below) in a closely fought battle with Hackney Free and Parochial, Frampton Park Girls' Group and Haggerston School.
There were a range of workshops and an all-female talent show finale closed the event. Winning contestant, singer Kiyah Sesay, 15, from Homerton, received £100 in shopping vouchers. The event was organised by Hackney's Young Women's Group with support from Youth Services and the Youth Opportunity Fund. Landmark decision

An artist's impressions of the development from Wilton Way (above) and Sylvester Path (right)

By Emma Britton

THE future of the Hackney Empire looks brighter following a planning decision which means the theatre can sell a building it owns and pay off much of its debt.

Empire chiefs will get £1.1million from the developers of the site at 117 Wilton Way, which will go a long way to help the theatre pay off the £1.5million debt it has accumulated.

On 10 March, the Council's planning sub-committee approved proposals to turn the building at the rear of the Victorian theatre into 25 new homes, which will also include a rehearsal space for the Empire and wider community.

At the beginning of February, the theatre significantly reduced the number of shows it was staging, to give its board time to put together a package of measures to ensure it could continue to put on productions. The Empire's education and community programmes have carried on as normal.

At a public meeting on 11 March, the Empire's interim chief executive, Clarie Middleton, announced the theatre's board had put together a positive plan, meaning more shows would start in the summer, with the much-loved pantomime running as usual at the end of the year.

A further vote of confidence in the theatre's future comes in the shape of an iconic pin badge designed to represent Hackney in the run up to the 2012 Games.

The London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games launched the Hackney Empire badge following a competition last year which gave residents the chance to choose the local landmark they felt best represented the borough.

Capturing change

By Ruth Garland

THE borough's many faces looked out from photos at the launch of an exhibition celebrating the work of 12 of Hackney's estimated 3,000 voluntary and community groups.

'Changing Lives' features the work of East London-based photographer Katherine Green.

Representatives from all the groups featured in the exhibition attended the opening at Rivington Place, EC2. Thanh Vu founded the An Viet Foundation in 1982, to help thousands of refugees who had fled to London from Vietnam since the late 1970s. He said: "We had no money for the first five years as we knew nothing about the system here. Now we have integrated into British society. With our effort we can turn around many things from worse to better, especially in Hackney."

Kashin, a community sports coach with the Wilton Estate Tenants and Residents Association, explained how it provided musical and sporting facilities and tuition for residents.

He said: "I learn from them and they learn from me. I want to be an example to the other kids; so they can give back to the community as well."

'Changing Lives' will tour Hackney for six months, visiting public spaces, community buildings and estates. The 12 groups featured include Body of Christ, which serves the French speaking Congolese community; Hands Inc, which offers complementary therapies and art therapy; and the North London Muslim Community Centre. The exhibition was part-funded by Team Hackney and the Council, and organised by HCVS.

Blue Badge fraudsters fined

FOUR people have pleaded guilty to charges of misusing Blue Badges, following proceedings brought by Hackney Council.

The prosecutions, at Thames Magistrates Court on 10 March, are part of the Council's ongoing efforts to wipe out Blue Badge fraud in the borough. Since August, an anti-fraud team has been working to crack down on people who abuse the national disabled parking scheme.

Abbas Ud-dean Ahmad, 35, of Westrow Drive, Ilford; Kurat Chuhan, 24, of Brooke Road, E5; Besim Hisenaj, 41, of Oval Road, NW1; and Daniel Merrifield-Blissett, 20, of Albion Road, E8, all pleaded guilty and were all fined.

Since January, the Council has brought eight successful prosecutions for Blue Badge fraud. Between them, the perpetrators committed 22 offences. The Blue Badge scheme exists to give disabled people crucial access to the services and amenities they need.

Back in the old school days

By Karyn Michael

ONE of London's oldest schools celebrates its 490th anniversary this month with a commemorative exhibition at Hackney Museum.

Hackney Free and Parochial Church of England secondary in Paragon Road, E9, was founded in 1520 by Christopher Urswick, the Rector of Hackney.

To mark its anniversary, a celebration on 18 March began with a reception at the school, followed by an official launch event at the Museum, attended by the Bishop of London, Rt Reverend Richard Chartres, and the school's head teacher Richard Brown. The 490th anniversary also coincides with major work to refurbish the school as part of the borough's £167million Building Schools for the Future (BSF) programme.

Mr Brown said: "As a school we are proud of our long history and excited about our future. We will be enjoying state-of-the-art facilities, modern classrooms and a new school hall by September."

The exhibition, titled 'Hackney Free Makes History', features a written history of the school's buildings; early photos of schoolchildren in the playground and playing sports; and ephemera including school uniforms, reports, school work, cups, punishment books and a copy of the first school newsletter. There is also a 1950s desk which visitors can sit at and practice copybook handwriting.

Present day Hackney Free pupil Canicia Charlery, 12, said: "I think that the exhibition is going to have a big impact on the community because it shows you how much my school has been part of Hackney's history and how it has changed. The exhibition shows how much we care about our school's history and we want Hackney to be proud."

Fellow student Kahi Mansfield, 11, added: "I feel privileged and proud to be part of our school's history."

The free exhibition at Hackney Museum, Reading Lane, E8, runs until 12 June.

History classes

Hackney Free was one of many schools created by the church during the 16th century for children whose parents could not afford to pay any fees.

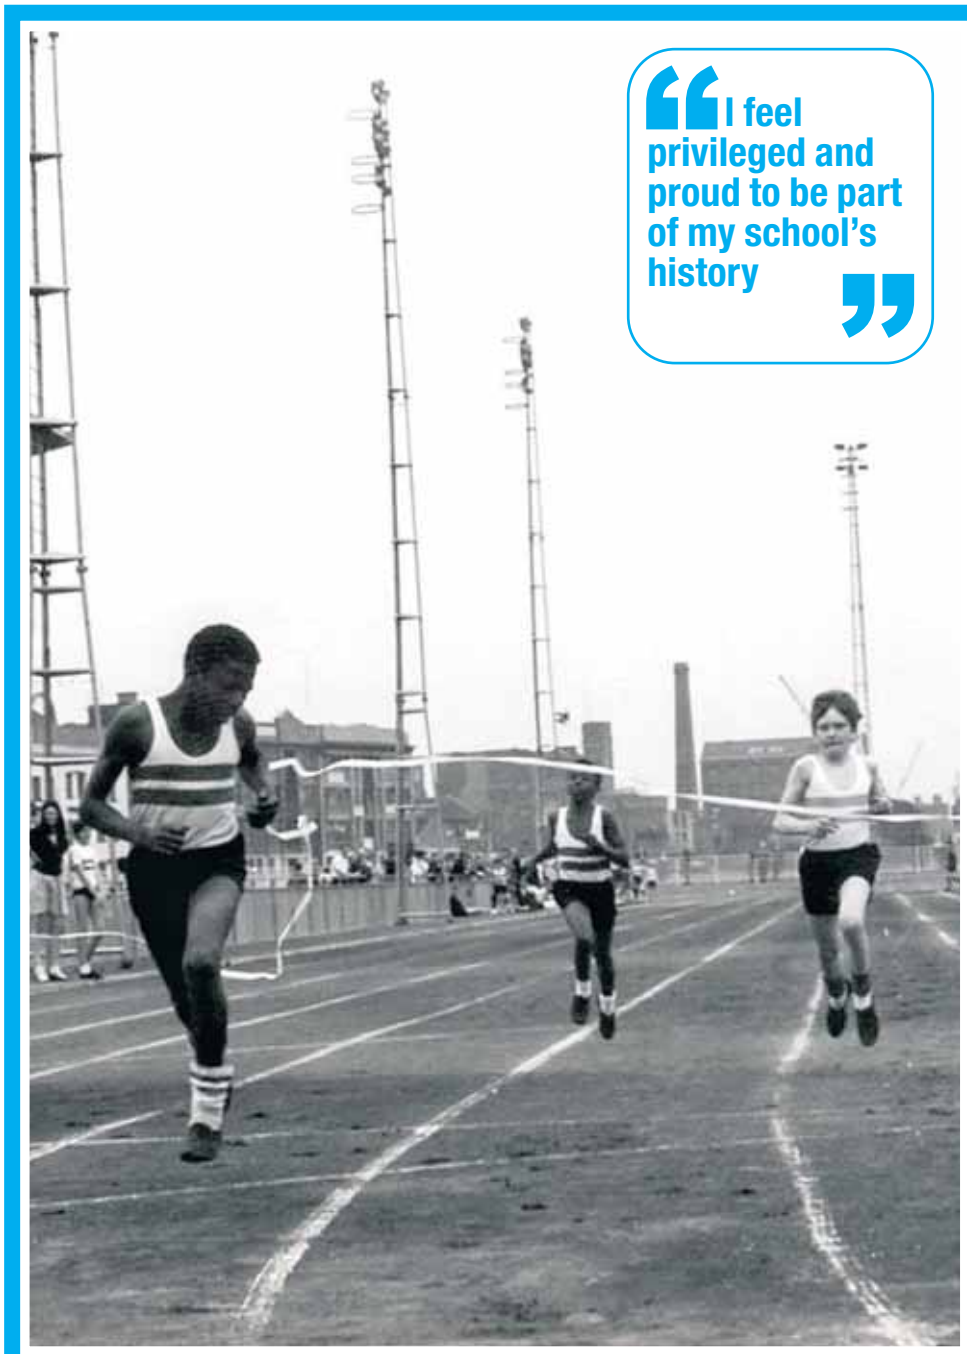

The school was built in the reign of King Henry VIII and was housed in Christopher Urswick's Rectory, known as the Church House.

It provided free education to twelve Hackney boys.

In 1714, a Parochial Charity School was started to educate and clothe 30 boys and 20 girls. The free school and the parochial school were joined together in 1772 to form Hackney Free and Parochial School as we know it today.

Free swimming lessons help older people take the plunge

The swimmers celebrate a new-found liking for water – thanks to free swimming lessons at Council leisure centres

By Marcel Reinard

MORE than 50 older people have learnt to swim since the beginning of this year, thanks to free lessons – and a touch of courage.

Aimed at those who were apprehensive about swimming, the 12-week course was organised by GLL, which runs Hackney's leisure centres. Many of the group, whose eldest member is 77, used to be afraid of the water. But they now enjoy a dip, and can even help younger family members to learn to swim.

One student, Joan Glasgow, 61, said: "I used to take my grandchildren to their swimming lessons and they would say 'Gran should be learning to swim before me'.

"Water was one of my biggest fears and I was frightened at first. But in a short space of time that fear has gone away."

Hackney's 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Ambassador, Dervis Konuralp, was poolside at Kings Hall Leisure Centre to congratulate the swimmers at the end of the course. He said: "It's a great social event for the older people, as well as a way to get fit."

> "Water was one of my biggest fears. But in a short space of time that fear has gone"

So far 16 free courses have been run at Hackney pools for teenagers, schools, adults with learning disabilities, people with health and mobility difficulties, over-50s and non-swimming families.

The scheme is a partnership between GLL, the Amateur Swimming Association and the Council.

Over-60s or under-18s can also swim for free at Britannia, Clissold and Kings Hall leisure centres, as part of a Government initiative, co-funded by the Council.

Bridge Academy's team at the mock trial

Passing judgement

PUPILS from Hackney's Bridge Academy have come runners-up in the local heat of a national magistrates' court mock trial competition.

They went head to head with Camden's Acland Burghley on 6 March at Highbury Corner Magistrates' Court, Islington.

The two teams of 12 to 15-year-olds took turns in prosecuting and defending a fictional case of a gang-related knife crime. Students took on the roles of lawyers, witnesses, magistrates and court staff. Judging was carried out by real magistrates and legal professionals. Magistrate Mel Simon said: "The standard of performance was extremely high this year, the outcome was a real cliff-hanger."

£15k dance marathon

AN eight-hour dance marathon at Hoxton Hall, featuring a stand-up routine from comedienne Jo Brand, has raised £15,000 for a Kingsland Road-based head and brain injury charity. More than 100 people danced for eight hours in support of Headway East London on 27 February. The charity's patron, Jo, said: "Headway are offering a fantastic service, which has really changed from when I first got involved. I was going to go and try and dance but I'm a bit scared I'll use up too many calories."

Step forward at Woodberry Down

HACKNEY'S biggest regeneration project has taken another step forward with the signing of a major agreement.

Tim Shields, the Council's Chief Executive, partners from the Homes and Communities Agency (HCA), developer Berkeley Homes, and Genesis Housing Group were at Woodberry Down on 17 March following the signing of a development agreement for phase one of the area's £1billion, 20-year regeneration project.

In January, the HCA gave the project £27million to build 187 new homes for social rent and 60 for shared ownership.

Work is set to begin this month and the new homes are due for completion by 2012/13.

The homes will be built across two sites, Woodberry Grove North, and the other on Green Lanes.

Tim Shields said: "The Council has pledged its commitment to residents to provide first-rate new housing fit for the 21st century.

"This is an important milestone for the regeneration of Woodberry Down, which is providing high quality affordable homes as well as key community facilities."

Construction is well under way with the first 117 social rented homes set to be finished next year. Over 300 private and intermediate homes are also being built.

PCHA, part of Genesis Housing Group, has been confirmed as the Registered Social Landlord, and will own and manage the new affordable homes on Woodberry Down once they are built.

Traders you can trust

Clockwise from above: Jerry Cooper (left) and Ruth Mottershead, from Theories Landscapes, which has designed a number of playgrounds in Hackney; the first two businesses receive their Buy With Confidence kite marks and certificates; Aj Sumal (left) & Mengha Singh Sumal of C&S Builders Merchants

A FAMILY-RUN building firm and a landscape architect's practice are the first two Hackney businesses to receive a new 'trusted trader' seal of approval.

C&S Builders Merchants, in Stamford Hill, and Theories Landscapes, in Broadway Market, have been named 'Buy With Confidence' traders after passing tough tests as part of the scheme launched by the Council's Trading Standards team last year.

Companies are assessed on every aspect of their business ranging from financial history to customer service.

If a firm passes these checks, it is entered onto a Buy With Confidence national database and public website.

Founded by three brothers, family business C&S Builders Merchants now employs 80 staff and is one of the largest independent suppliers of building material in East and North London.

Manager Aj Sumal said customers could now have added reassurance in the business. He said: "Becoming a Buy With Confidence trader is important to us because it's proof of our staff's dedication to providing a fair, personalised and knowledgeable service to customers in Hackney."

Theories Landscapes, which was set up in 1983, has designed many of Hackney's playgrounds, including ones at Princess May School, N16, and Trowbridge Village Green.

> "We hope that customers will get added reassurance from the Buy With Confidence stamp"

Jerry Cooper, Theories director, said: "We hope that customers will get added reassurance from the Buy With Confidence stamp.

"This borough is such a mixing pot of cultures and ethnicities, political ambitions and fantastic green spaces – once we arrived here we knew we would never want to live or work anywhere else."

The Council's Corporate Director for Neighbourhoods and Regeneration, Steve Douglas, said: "Both firms have proven that they can be relied upon to deliver a quality of service that Hackney residents can trust.

"We urge other businesses to get on board with the scheme and reap the benefits of a 'kite mark' that is becoming more recognisable for customers looking for a fair deal."

Open day for everyone

Hundreds drop in for community safety advice – and some fun family face-painting

By Ruth Garland

HUNDREDS of residents turned out for the first ever Hackney Community Safety Open Day at Stoke Newington Town Hall.

The all-day event on 13 March gave residents the opportunity to drop in and meet police officers, firefighters and staff from the Council's community safety and domestic violence teams.

Free refreshments and activities for children such as face-painting and art workshops were also on offer. Children of all ages took part in an exercise organised by voluntary sector group, Hands Inc, which used an exhibition of artworks by young people affected by gang activity, to invite visual responses from visitors. The event was organised by the Hackney Community Engagement Board (HCEB), an independent public forum supported by the Metropolitan Police Authority.

Chief Superintendent David Stone, Hackney's partnership Superintendent, addressed residents who had gathered in the newly-refurbished venue. He said: "We would like far more youth involvement. We're working with all secondary schools in the borough, and we're hoping to set up Young Community Action Panels (YCAPs).

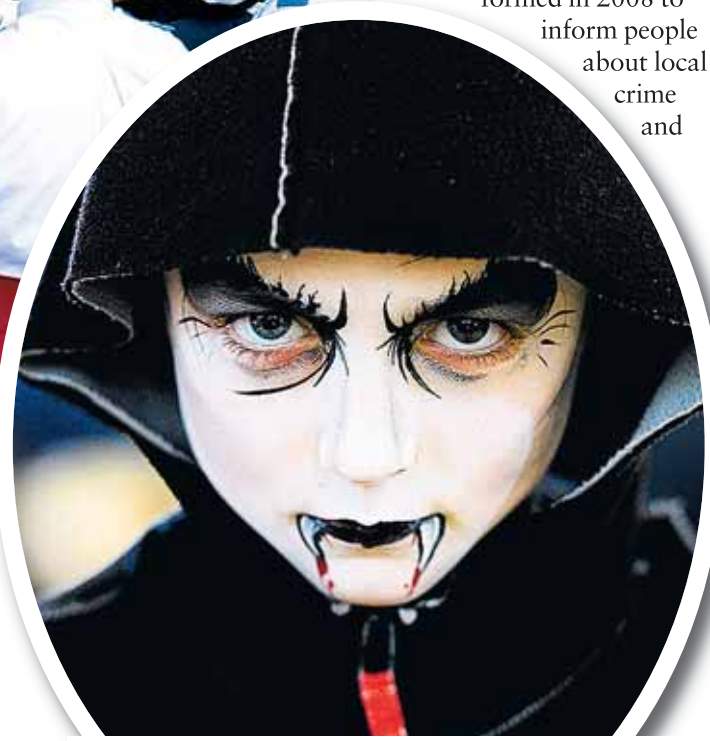

"The good news is that crime in Hackney has fallen for the sixth year and is at its lowest for ten years."

The Community Engagement Board was formed in 2008 to inform people about local crime and community safety issues.

> "The good news is that crime in Hackney has fallen for the sixth year and is at its lowest for ten years"

Its quarterly public meetings provide a forum for police to report back to the community on policing tactics and initiatives, and allows residents to raise probing questions.

Board members are drawn mainly from community and voluntary sector organisations in the borough, including those representing minority and victimised groups.

KEY FACT

Crime in Hackney is at its lowest level for at least 10 years, according to the latest figures from the Met Police

Hackney

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

Her kind of place

Picture: Alice Hawkins

Paloma Faith (above) hopes to move back to her childhood home of Hackney 'as soon as I can buy a place'. Her debut album cover (below)

By Donna Walsh

BETWEEN the nationwide concerts, interviews, and guest spots on TV shows, only in the hectic life of Paloma Faith could a tour of Germany be 'restful'.

Demand for the 24-year-old singer is high, whether gigging in Berlin, or debating educational issues with former MP Michael Portillo. But despite all the attention, the Hackney-bred star is still unashamedly proud of the borough.

"It's a great place, you only have to go to Ridley Road Market on a Saturday and you can hear music everywhere," she said. Adding: "I used to say when I was little, that I wanted my ashes spread across the number 73 bus route; this was our place, Hackney."

Despite having moved to West London, she's determined not to forget her roots. "I'll come back as soon as I can buy a place," she said.

Brought up in a house off Stoke Newington Church Street, her early years were spent taking in Dalston and Stoke Newington. Of Clissold Park, she said: "We were naughty – we used to jump the fence and hang out in the park."

And of the local nightlife: "I'd go raving all night, go to Mr Bagel in Dalston, then come home and do my coursework," she confessed.

Paloma is a strong advocate of her Hackney education. She said: "As a very young child I had learning difficulties, but I was always creative and the teachers nurtured my confidence."

Starting with ballet, at the age of four, in a class off Kingsland Road, she was encouraged to study arts. She left school with three A-star GCSEs, three As, one B and two Cs, getting a mention in a local newspaper. But after studying for a degree in contemporary dance, Paloma was looking for a new direction. She said: "While I'd always danced, as an adult, I realised it wasn't for me. So I did a Masters in theatre direction and it opened up a platform of other styles as a performer. I always sang and knew I could sing in tune, but it was more of a laugh or a hobby. It wasn't until later that I started to really work on it."

She began to mix forms, Tina Turner meets Marilyn Monroe, Grace Jones and Etta James, with a distinctly burlesque finish, helped along with cabaret stints as a singer and magician's assistant, and as a model for Agent Provocateur.

After one performance, fortuitously witnessed by Epic Records, she was asked to come to the music label's HQ. The interview went well – right up to the moment she cursed the A&R manager for using his mobile while she sang. Nine months later, the same manager called back with a contract, admitting he hadn't seen as memorable an act since.

With the release of her first album 'Do You Want The Truth Or Something Beautiful?' and appearing in Terry Gilliam's 'The Imaginarium Of Dr Parnassus', the future looks bright. Paloma recently completed a Haiti benefit single – 'I've Put A Spell On You' with among others, Shane McGowan, Johnny Depp, Nick Cave and Chrissie Hynde – and is to appear in a Channel 4 film 'I Don't Care' later this year.

But all this success is yet to save her from the stiletto's arch enemy, rainy summer festivals: "I've done loads, but I don't really like them. Maybe I'll get someone to carry me through the mud," she joked. And judging by current demand, that may be one of the few chances for Paloma to put her feet up this year.

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: Why do recycling trucks sometimes block roads during busy periods, and is there anything that can be done to speed up collections? I support recycling, but the delays are annoying.

A: The Council apologises for delays to road users caused by the collection of refuse and recycling in the borough. However, it has a legal obligation to provide these services and aims to do so as quickly as possible. Due to the stop-start nature of the work, and the size of the trucks, some inconvenience will be inevitable. Truck drivers know to pull over where possible, to allow other road users to pass, and will never intentionally cause obstructions. They work to Health and Safety Executive (HSE) guidelines, which state that lorries should position themselves in the centre of the road to prevent other vehicles attempting to pass through small gaps. Residents can help to speed up collections by putting Green Boxes out by 7.30am on their collection day, and by grouping similar materials together.

'Prairie' planting

By Karyn Michael

BUTTERFIELD Green in Stoke Newington is all set for spring – thanks to a project to give its plant life a boost.

Members of the Butterfield Green User Group and the Council's Parks service joined forces to replace shrubs with a 'prairie-style' design of wild grasses and flowers.

The main benefit of using these sorts of plants is that they come up every year and require little care. Their flowers and seed heads also provide food for butterflies, bees and other insects.

Speaking at the planting session on 12 March, Annie Wilson, of Butterfield Green User Group, said: "Many local people had expressed an interest in improving the planting in Butterfield Green.

"We were keen to use sustainable planting rather than bedding plants that get thrown away at the end of the season, so we worked with the Council to create a planting scheme that is sustainable, attractive and beneficial to wildlife.

> "We worked with the Council to create a planting scheme that is attractive sustainable, and beneficial to wildlife"

"We look forward to seeing the fruits of our labour in the summer when the entrance should be ablaze with colour. We would like to thank everyone from Hackney Parks Service who worked hard to make our vision a reality."

Estates double food recycling rate

By Naomi Ocansey

FOOD waste recycling on estates has doubled since the scheme was expanded to cover more parts of the borough earlier this year.

With 62 estates now participating, February collections were more than twice the size of those in January. Food waste is turned into compost, which is used in Hackney's parks and green spaces.

Monika Hazelton (left) from Lea View House Estate, E5, encourages fellow residents to take part. "It's great news that we have doubled the amount of food waste being recycled on Hackney estates in such a short space of time. Those who contributed should feel good about doing something positive for the planet. This means that residents are committed to recycling as much as possible and we can achieve even higher rates as the year continues."

Residents on participating estates are issued with a small kitchen caddy and compostable liners to collect food waste, which is then emptied into recycling bins on site. Food such as fruit, bread and pasta, raw vegetables and tea bags can be recycled through the scheme.

Waterway to make a difference

By Kate Gibney

MORE than 20 people got involved in British Waterways' towpath tidy on the River Lee Navigation on 13 March.

With painting works, litter and graffiti clearance to be done, there was plenty to keep everyone busy.

Volunteer Felicity McClintock said: "Towpath Tidy is a great opportunity to get out and do something active in your area. Today we've all rolled up our sleeves and worked together to make a real difference to this stretch of the Lee Navigation. It's been really satisfying to see the impact of all our hard work which will hopefully be enjoyed by lots of people across Hackney who use this waterway daily."

Simon Bamford, a British Waterways' manager, added: "We want communities in Hackney to feel a sense of ownership in their local canals and rivers, and Towpath Tidy provides a great opportunity for people to get involved and find out more."

Towpath Tidy is part of a nationwide programme that is supported by the Campaign for Rural England, Keep Britain Tidy's The Big Tidy Up campaign, the Inland Waterways Association, and Thames 21.

Mossbourne Community Academy's sixth form students celebrate the school's 'outstanding' Ofsted rating

Truly outstanding

By Marcel Reinard

A HACKNEY school has received an 'outstanding' rating by Ofsted.

Following an inspection by the Government's education regulator in January, Mossbourne Community Academy in E5 was praised for providing 'high-quality classroom teaching and learning'.

Principal Sir Michael Wilshaw said Ofsted's new way of assessing schools was more rigorous, with inspectors spending more time in lessons. He added: "Inspectors made judgments on our performance based on what they saw and heard rather than placing too great an emphasis simply on data and previous reports."

In the latest round of inspections, 10 other schools in the borough were assessed. Berger Primary in E9 got a 'good' rating and was commended for its 'extremely stimulating' environment with inclusive activities to help develop 'well-rounded individuals'. Head teacher Karen Coulthard said: "Ofsted was impressed with the way creativity was used in the curriculum, and our environments outside school hours, such as computer clubs for girls to help increase ICT take up."

Primaries Grazebrook, in N16, and St Monica's, in N1, also received 'good' ratings. Both were praised for significant improvements since their last inspections.

Six schools received 'satisfactory' ratings; Bridge Academy, E2; Hackney Free and Parochial, E9; St Paul's with St Michael's, E8; Lubavitch, N16; Daubeney, E5; and Whitmore, N1, and one received 'inadequate', Millfields Community School, E5.

Under Ofsted's new framework, inspectors observe twice as many lessons, often with head teachers accompanying them.

Orchard to get £6m revamp

ORCHARD Primary School is to undergo a £6million extension and refurbishment in line with learning and sustainability goals, following planning approval from Hackney Council last month.

The project, designed by architects Rivington Street Studios, will increase the size of the South Hackney school's premises and remodel the 1920s building. In addition to a new entrance and additional space for extended nursery accommodation, the refurbishment will combine library, ICT and resource functions.

Its green credentials – which will include solar thermal technology and a 'living roof' – have been praised by BREEAM, the environmental assessment method.

Work is due to begin this summer.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Mike Vance with Nintendo DS pupils at Millfields

Maths at their fingertips

CAMERAS were rolling at Millfields Community School on 12 March, as the BBC filmed an innovative approach to maths.

Pupils from Afro-Caribbean backgrounds are being loaned a Nintendo DS and brain training games to buoy their skills, as part of a pilot scheme by The Learning Trust. It runs until the end of the school year, and is part of a nationwide drive to improve the performance of Black Caribbean students.

So far, 12 Hackney schools are involved: St Matthias, Grazebrook, Tyssen, and Northwold in N16; Baden Powell, St Scholastica's, Millfields, Rushmore and Daubeney in E5; Gainsborough and Morningside in E9; and Brook in E8 .

Most of the schools will also be supported by a maths club and parent and pupil workshops.

Mike Vance, from The Learning Trust, said: "This is about helping black Caribbean pupils to rehearse and practise their mathematical skills when they're not in school, but it's also about changing perceptions. We want all our pupils to say: I love maths, it's a cool subject."

Making a drama about finance

Southwold Pupils perform 'A Wealth of Stages'

PUPILS at Southwold primary, E5, have used newfound economic skills to produce an original play about the benefits of financial literacy.

Youngsters received classes from creative arts charity Create for the project – A Wealth of Stages – designed to improve financial awareness among London schoolchildren aged nine to 11. Children visited the Bank of England Museum and attended workshops about saving, budgeting, and inflation.

The two-week programme, which ended on 5 March, finished with the pupils writing, budgeting for and performing a play examining what had been learnt.

Well versed?

PUPILS who enter a poetry competition could be in with a chance of winning a range of prizes to help hone their talents.

The Poetry Society's Foyle Young Poets of the Year Award is open to individuals and classes aged 11 to 17. Poems can be on any theme, and all lengths and styles are acceptable. As well as a week's intensive residential course where winners can develop their creative writing skills, prizes include a short school residency with a leading poet; and a year's youth membership to the Poetry Society. The three schools that submit the most entries will receive a selection of books from Faber & Faber, Bloodaxe Books and Salt Publishing for their libraries. Entries close on 31 July.

Foul Tide is loosely based on events that took place in a small fishing community in South Devon between 1897 and 1917. In the shadow of the First World War, the play brings into sharp focus the harsh realities for a traditional community caught up in the preparations for war. 16yrs+. Love machines?

By Marcel Reinard

Lu Chunsheng and Jia Aili: Counterpoints, 31 March to 15 May. Iniva, Rivington Place, EC2

The struggle between man and machine continues to provoke fascination and fear: as much seen as a perversion of blurring lines of nature and metal, as the socio-political implications of the industrial revolution.
Chinese artist Lu Chunsheng himself spent much of the last decade dissecting the industrial age through his works and his latest film carries on a tradition of mechanism with artful, fantastical storytelling.
'The First Man Who Brought A Juicer Bought It Not For Drinking Juice' uses both human and mechanical characters: a reaper machine, used for harvesting grain and given Frankenstein-like characteristics; and the mechanic that cares and repairs it. The irony, created by the artist, is that humanity is denigrated to serve the machine, reversing the traditional relationship.
In a similar vein, Jia Aili presents Make Believe: a new set of paintings representing the individual's vulnerability in a rapidly modernising society, conjuring up the disorientating emotions felt in a developing world.
Together both artists draw on industrial progress, social corrosion and a battle for survival in the machine age.

Golden Voice of Africa

By Marcel Reinard

Salif Keita, Barbican Centre, Silk Street, EC2, 7 April, 7.30pm

AS a royal descendant of the founder of the Malian Empire and a singer against the traditions of his country, Salif Keita is arguably a marketer's dream. Add his former poverty – despite Malian nobility – limited eyesight and being born albino, and the backdrop can sometimes supersede his extraordinary talent and magical voice.
In the 1980s, he sang with leading West African bands and signed with Island Records to become perhaps his continent's most famous performer. In the next decade he crossed genres, collaborating with Wayne Shorter and Carlos Santana among others to solidify his position in the English-speaking market.
But album 'Moffou' (2002) was an exquisite return to his Malian roots, recorded with only tints of electronic instruments. It was nominated for a 2003 Grammy and BBC Radio 3 Awards for World Music, as well as mixed, remixed and reproduced right across the musical spectrum.
Salif now tours extensively internationally, with strong links in France, but still lives in homeland of Mali. He tours with a mixed Malian-North American ensemble that meshes rock, funk and jazz yet keeps with the griot poetry tradition to create an original yet deeply African sound.

Discover your creativity all year round

DISCOVER Young Hackney 10 (DYH '10) took February by storm, with 45 events across the borough.

In partnership with Hackney's Youth Arts Cluster, it showcased the best of youth arts activities. But it doesn't stop with the end of the festival. The cluster – a group of 25 arts organisations – offers the chance to take part in similar events all year round.

New for DYH '10 was a media partnership with What's Up Information. Here Chris Warburton, What's Up web editor, and undercover reporter Amber Allsop document some highlights. Amber responded to What's Up's call for writers. She attended events including a London College of Fashion workshop (left). She said: "It's been interesting. Everyone was friendly and helpful, and I would recommend it."

She was accompanied on assignments by photographer Lydia Valentine, 14, from Homerton, who was part of a group who completed a five-month training programme to be photojournalists for DYH '10.

Shakespeare reimagined

Clockwise from above: Hermia and Orlando; Bottom the Weaver transformed into a donkey; and Titania, Queen of the Fairies in Immediate Theatre's production of A Midsummer Night's Dream

All stories by Chris Warburton, with additional reporting by Amber Allsop, 13

WHEN local young people took part in a workshop remaking a classic Shakespeare play, opinion was divided over the added 21st century twist.

Local teenagers used scrap and recycled materials to create a set and costumes for A Midsummer Night's Dream – to be performed by the Immediate Theatre group in Hoxton from 15 to 18 February.

What's Up's undercover reporter Amber, attended the workshop expecting a traditional Shakespearean recreation, but she was left disappointed.

She said: "I had seen the play previously and admired the set and costumes, so thought the course would be great.

"Instead of the proper set and old-fashioned costumes, the play was an urban adaptation set in a block of graffitied flats.

"It says nowhere in the leaflet that this is what I would be doing."

19-year-old Jerome, the workshop's peer facilitator, defended the format. He said: "The play needed to be unorthodox to display the actors' versatility. We didn't want to be limited by the original script.

> "We didn't want to be limited by the original script"

"It's more interesting than a traditional Shakespeare play, because we created something encompassing all our personal interests and ideas."

YOUNG musicians put on a dazzling show at Hoxton Hall – performing alongside professional brass band Brass Roots.

Playing songs they'd written themselves as part of a mentoring programme, the group performed to over 50 people on 19 February.

Musician Savannah says the group formed a close bond: "We really trusted each other. Because this was our project it had to be great. I now have the courage to think 'If I can do this, what else can I do?'"

Participant Bily added: "I've learnt so much, and I can see myself with a career in music."

£150k for HIV hub

By Marcel Reinard

A PLANNED HIV centre at Homerton University Hospital has received a £150,000 boost from a City-based charity.

The hospital's Chief Executive, Nancy Hallett, thanked the Schroder Foundation, calling the donation 'a significant boost to our fundraising campaign'. The hospital is working to raise £6million to build a new facility to provide services for local people affected by HIV and their families.

The number of HIV positive patients seen by the hospital has doubled in the past 10 years, and the new centre will enable doctors to address clinical needs, while also providing on-site support to help address their emotional, social and practical needs.

The Schroder Foundation was established in 1944 and makes grants to medical charities, international relief, social welfare, the environment and the arts.

The Schroder family has a long history of philanthropy in East London. Baron Sir John Henry Schroder was Treasurer of the German Hospital in Dalston Road – which merged with the Homerton in 1986 – from 1843 until his death in 1910. Current chairman, Bruno L Schroder, said: "I am delighted my family's charitable foundation is able to continue our tradition of supporting health services in East London.

"We hope that our support will encourage others to make a contribution towards this very worthy appeal."

New birth centre is open

A NEW midwife-led birth centre has opened for women having their babies at Homerton hospital.

The purpose-built centre aims to provide a home-from-home environment, managed by midwives with support from maternity assistants, who provide a wide range of delivery choice for mothers with uncomplicated pregnancies.

It is based alongside the main hospital delivery suite housed in a new £9million extension built at the hospital. The centre boasts four birthing rooms, two with birthing pools, and facilities for partners and relatives to accompany mothers in labour.

Midwives at Homerton's new birth centre

The service is available 24-hours a day, 52 weeks a year.

Joan Douglas, Head of Midwifery, said: "Our overarching aim is to provide a top-quality service that values women and offers them a greater range of choice in the way they give birth.

"Women will either book to use the centre as their preference when they first meet their midwife, or they can be assessed when they go into labour and, if appropriate, can have their delivery in the centre."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Breast is best

AN exhibition from art school students at Linden Children's Centre, N16, has helped promote the benefits of breastfeeding. Commissioned by child health charity Best Beginnings, the free show by Central St Martin School of Art students offered an introduction to NHS City & Hackney's revised breastfeeding policy. Dr Lesley Mountford, Joint Director of Public Health, said the NHS City and Hackney's aim was to make all women feel confident about breastfeeding both at home and outside. She said: "Breast milk helps to protect babies from infections, diabetes, asthma, eczema and obesity later in life. Women who breastfeed are less likely to develop ovarian and breast cancers and weak bones in later life and are more likely to return to their pre-pregnancy weight."

Posters of the exhibition are available from: bestbeginnings.org.uk; for info on NHS City & Hackney's breastfeeding policy, e-mail: kate.dantes@chpct.nhs.uk

Alcohol checks for mums-to-be

AN innovative study by Homerton hospital could reveal the full extent of the damaging effects of alcohol on pregnant women.

Over the past year, the hospital has invited expectant mums to try a new service that can help discover if alcohol consumption is putting an unborn child at risk.

It is hoped the tests will act as an indicator for drinking patterns, as well as giving midwives a clearer picture of the health of the mother.

Homerton biochemist, Jean Deenmamode, said: "It is extremely alarming how women may be totally unaware of how dangerous to the foetus alcohol can be in early pregnancy."

So far more than 200 women have taken advantage of the new service, which will continue for another year. To take part, talk to your midwife or GP.

Talk about tuberculosis

EVENTS aimed at raising awareness of the dangers of tuberculosis are taking place across the borough as part of World TB Day on 24 March.

NHS City & Hackney – in partnership with the Council and Homerton hospital – has organised all day drop-in advice sessions at Hackney Community College, N1; Ridley Road Market, E8; and Tesco, Morning Lane, E8.

TB is a curable infectious disease, usually affecting the lungs. Its main symptoms include coughing up blood, fever, night sweats, tiredness and weight loss.

If you, or someone you know, has concerns about TB see your GP; call NHS Direct on: 0845 4647; or visit your local NHS walk-in centre.

'The house not so good, nor the prospect good at all - but the gardens are excellent'
Diarist Samuel Pepys' opinion of Brooke House

Lost Tudor treasure

Clockwise from above: Back of Brooke House, c1900; interior views of the Tudor mansion, c1920; various elevations reveal the breadth of changes to Brooke House throughout the ages; undated representation of the chapel interior; an engraving of the mansion, known as the Manor of Hackney, 1797

By Sally England, Local Studies Librarian

BROOKE Road is named after the Tudor mansion that once stood on the site of BSix Brooke House Sixth Form College.

The earliest known building at that location – on the corner of Kenninghall and Lower Clapton roads – dates from 1409, and by the end of that century it was probably the country home of William Worsley, Dean of St Paul's.

The house was built around a courtyard with a brick hall on the eastern side, containing a gatehouse with turret staircase. On the north side, was a chapel and outbuildings; on the west and south, various two-storey timber-framed buildings.

In 1532, it was described as the 'Manor of Hackney' and held by Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland. Three years later it was taken by Henry VIII in payment of a debt. The king granted the estate to his advisor Thomas Cromwell who made substantial alterations, but took the house back the following year, and in July 1536, it hosted a meeting between Henry, his wife Jane Seymour, and Henry's estranged eldest daughter Mary, who had agreed to recognise her father as head of the Church of England.

After Henry's death in 1547, the estate passed through several owners and tenants, including Sir Ralph Sadler who built Sutton House; Lady Margaret Douglas, Countess of Lennox, whose connections with the Scottish throne did not endear her to Elizabeth I and resulted in two spells in the Tower of London; and in 1621, Fulke Greville, 1st Baron Brooke. The estate covered 200 acres north from what is now Downs Road to Northwold Road, and between Upper and Lower Clapton Roads west to beyond Rendelsham Road.

The diarist John Evelyn visited in 1654 and although he enjoyed the gardens, found the now unfashionable Tudor house to be 'a despicable building'.

Twelve years later Samuel Pepys wrote 'the house not so good, nor the prospect good at all – but the gardens are excellent'.

The house was converted into a mental asylum in 1759 by William Clarke. It continued to be used for that purpose until the Second World War when it was damaged by bombing in 1940.

London County Council bought the house in 1944 and, although it was not beyond repair, decided it should be demolished. A record was taken of the structure and archaeology as the destruction progressed – only then was the historical significance of Brooke House realised.

Its few remaining relics are a medieval wall painting held at the Museum of London and a quantity of wood panelling, later used by Harrow School. But copies of two published surveys and a collection of photographs are held at Hackney Archives as a reminder of the building which has been described as the saddest loss to Hackney's built heritage.

Hackney Council is committed to improving services, increasing opportunities for all, and making a safer, cleaner, greener borough. Here we focus on a service that helps to make this possible:

MAKING HER MARK

Lee-Marie Grant, Senior Electoral Services Officer

A CHAMPION for democracy in Hackney, Lee-Marie has been working for Electoral Services for the past 18 months.

She updates the list of registered voters to ensure residents will be able to vote in the local elections on 6 May. She said: "People in Hackney tend not to register because they don't understand why they should. Once I explain to them that you can't vote and may find it hard to get credit without being registered, they sign up. For me, every new person on the register is an achievement."

Lee-Marie has also been working to find accessible buildings to use as polling stations, making sure there is one close by to every resident. She says the leg work is worth it: "With so much change coming to Hackney in advance of the 2012 Games, I think it's important to listen to every voice – so I not only encourage people to register – but to vote in the local and Mayoral elections on 6 May."

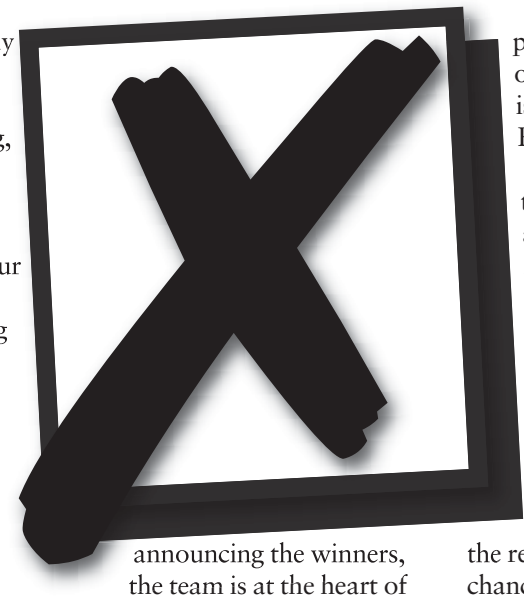

Can you vote?

By Rosalind Stannard

EVERYBODY is talking about when the next General Election will be. But did you know that you can vote for the Mayor of Hackney and local councillors on 6 May?

They make decisions that affect your everyday life, about everything from roads and recycling, to education and climate change.

So voting for the people who run your borough is as important as voting for the people who run the country.

The Council's Electoral Services team works to make sure every eligible person in Hackney is registered to vote on polling day. From issuing voting papers and setting up polling stations, to counting every single vote, and announcing the winners, the team is at the heart of democracy in Hackney.

Every year, hundreds of people turn up to vote but can't because they are not registered. Even though your vote is anonymous, to prevent fraud, you can only vote if your name is on the Electoral Register.

You must contact the Elections Team and register by 20 April so they can ensure your name is on the list.

You may not think you want to vote now, but if an issue comes up that you want to have your say on, if you are on the register you will get the chance to vote on it.

KEY FACT

Residents can take children or carers into polling stations with them

AS more and more people in Hackney take up cycling, help is at hand for teenagers who want to get on their bikes.

A new cycling club for the borough's young people has been launched on Nightingale Estate.

Under 19s can learn everything cycle related from how to fix punctures and change tyres to skills to increase confidence on the road. There is even the chance to gain a certificate in cycle maintenance.

The project is a partnership between Hackney Homes, InterlinkxCIC, Safer Neighbourhoods, The Learning Trust, Cycling Club Hackney and Nightingale Cycles. The club will be open every Wednesday from 4.30-6.30pm at Olympus Square, E5.

For older cyclists, a 'Bicycle Pit Stop' free advice service will be held in London Fields on 25 March from 3.30-6.30pm. Qualified mechanics will be on hand to give bicycle MOTs. Tips on cycle routes, safety, and how to register bikes on a national anti-theft database will also be on offer.

Don't take a risk

By Miranda Yates

SHOREDITCH clubbers and pub-goers are being urged to take advantage of a new marshalled taxi rank.

The campaign also hopes to draw more cab drivers to the rank, opposite Shoreditch Town Hall, and close to the 333 nightclub in Hoxton.

Posters will be displayed in ladies' toilets in pubs and clubs, as well as out on the streets. Shoreditch bars are supporting the Council scheme, which is a continuation of December's successful Hackney Say Relax initiative to help Christmas revellers get home safely. As well as offering free advertising space in their premises, participating venues are asking security staff to direct customers to the rank.

Hackney Hosts – girls and guys on Vespa scooters – will also be out on Friday and Saturday nights, pointing the way to the rank and handing out safety information.

Licensed taxi drivers will also be offered information, promotional air fresheners for their vehicles, and the chance to have a cup of tea and make use of the facilities at The Barley Mow pub in Curtain Road and The Old Blue Last in Eastern Street.

Steve Douglas, the Council's Corporate Director for Neighbourhoods & Regeneration, said: "Shoreditch pubs as well as the police and the Council are working together to encourage more Hackney visitors to get home safely in a licensed cab.

"By picking up an unlicensed cab, people are walking into a car belonging to a total stranger. We urge people not to take the risk."

MORE INFO

The marshalled taxi rank is open 10pm-3am, every Fri and Sat. To get the number of two licensed cab companies, wherever you are, text Cabwise to: 60835

NEWS IN BRIEF

Freedom Pass deadline

OLDER residents who haven't yet renewed their Freedom Pass should make haste to avoid paying for travel.

All current passes expire on 31 March, although they can be used for up to two months afterwards. After this, people will be without a valid pass until their new one arrives, which should take about 10 days.

Freedom Passes are paid for by the Council, grant free public transport across London for the over 60s and disabled people.

The new pass combines both Oyster and ITSO smart card technology with a photograph of the owner, rather than having to use a separate photocard, as is currently the case.

Those needing to renew their pass can do so at their local Post Office. Alternatively call: 0845 275 7054, e-mail: mobility@londoncouncils.gov.uk, or visit: www.londoncouncils.gov.uk/freedompass/default.htm

Sparks set to fly

A £17MILLION fund has been pledged to make London the electric vehicle capital of Europe.

The cash will pay for thousands of electric charge points with 25,000 set to be installed in the capital by 2015, meaning no Londoner will be more than a mile from a charging point.

Hackney is due to have its first publicly accessible electric vehicle charging point in Bentley Road, Dalston, in the next few months. There are plans to install more across the borough in 2010/11.

The funding consists of £9.3million from the Department for Transport, £5.6million from Transport for London (TfL), and £7.6million pledged from a range of public and private sector organisations.

The group will aim to deliver a network of around 7,500 charging points by 2013, with 1,600 charging points due to be installed over the next 12 months.

Job Profile
James Simpson

Housing Association & Partnership Officer, talks to Hackney Today about the role of Affordable Housing Monitoring & Development Officer

What are the main responsibilities?
Your work has the potential to improve the quality of life for over 100,000 people – residents who live in homes provided by housing organisations. Your main task will be to create positive partnerships with the 60-plus housing organisations working in the borough, helping them to achieve excellent services that respond to residents' needs and concerns.
We can deliver more when we work together, so you will put systems in place that encourage co-ordination of resources and sharing of expertise. It is also going to be really important to evaluate the success of these partnerships, finding more ways we can work together.

In what ways is the role challenging?
This is a new role, so you will have the opportunity to shape the way housing organisations work and operate, especially encouraging them to engage with residents.
You will need to create good personal connections with the organisations, really understand how they work, and be able to positively influence decision makers.
The ideal candidate will know a lot about different collaborative approaches and best practice.

How is the job rewarding?
This role will make a visible difference to a huge number of people in Hackney. The successful candidate will be able to see it by simply talking to residents or walking around the borough.
The team works closely together, sharing knowledge, ideas and skills so they will get a lot of support and be encouraged to be innovative in their work.

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Water House – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch.
Chef Ben Spice puts a lot of time and energy into his vegetarian dishes.
He said: "It's really important that when carnivores look at our menu they are just as likely to give the vegetarian options serious consideration as they are those based around great animal and fish protein.
"For balance and efficiency in the global ecosystem the best diet for human kind is a wide and varied mix of fruit and vegetables combined with some dairy and a little bit of nose-to-tail meat eating.
"This dish has fantastic colour, flavour and texture and makes the perfect accompaniment to a crisp green salad. If you like the croquettes you can apply the same technique to leftovers. Try making some Italian style rice balls. Mix leftover veg and risotto rice into golf ball-sized treats, held together with a little beaten egg."

Beetroot & goat cheese croquettes

Makes eight generous croquettes

Preparation time 45 mins — 45
Cooking & cooling 5 mins — 5

Ingredients

- 600g beetroot boiled whole in their skins and chopped and diced into small pieces
- 600g potato peeled, cut into one-inch cubes and boiled until penetrable with a knife
- Generous handful of chopped parsley
- 400g hard goat cheese
- Put bread crumbs, flour and one beaten egg in three separate shallow dishes for coating

Method

- In a bowl crush together the potato, goat cheese, beetroot and parsley. The mixture should hold together, but be firm and dry to the touch. Taste and add salt and pepper as required
- Split into eight portions and mould into large classic croquette shapes
- Rest in the fridge for 10 minutes
- Coat in flour, then egg and then breadcrumbs. If you can see through the breadcrumbs you haven't got enough and need to repeat the process.
- Deep fry in rapeseed or sunflower oil until golden brown. Avoid palm and soya oil if possible as they're often associated with deforestation
- Serve with a crunchy green salad

Top tips

- Don't deprive yourself the occasional deep fried treat through misguided fear! Larger items when deep fried soak up comparatively little oil. For example, a bag of classic British chips is far less fatty than the same weight of French fries

IT'S the last chance for residents to contribute their ideas to the annual scrutiny survey which draws to a close on 26 March.
It is an opportunity to suggest the subjects that could be examined in the coming year by Hackney's Scrutiny Commissions – committees of councillors who work across party political lines to ensure the Council is operating in the best possible manner.
Each year, the five Scrutiny Commissions carry out reviews of subjects that are suggested by residents.
In the past, topics have ranged from housing to betting shops.
Anyone can get involved, either by attending meetings, registering their opinions or recommending areas for future work.
The Scrutiny Commissions are: Health in Hackney; Children & Young People; Governance & Resources; Living in Hackney; and Community Safety & Social Inclusion Scrutiny.
Last year's survey showed crime was among the top priorities for residents, so two commissions jointly investigated anti-social behaviour on estates, and recommended improved means to tackle the issue.
To take part in the anonymous survey call: 020 8356 3341; e-mail: scrutiny@hackney.gov.uk; or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/scrutiny
